

THE NEW SURPRISE SERIAL TRAIN NO. 13 PRESENTING THE LADY DAREDEVIL ELLEN OMES

Young Charlie Mitchell Is Dead

Followers of boxing in this country will no doubt regret to hear of the death of Charlie Mitchell, Jr., who was killed in action in France during the past month.

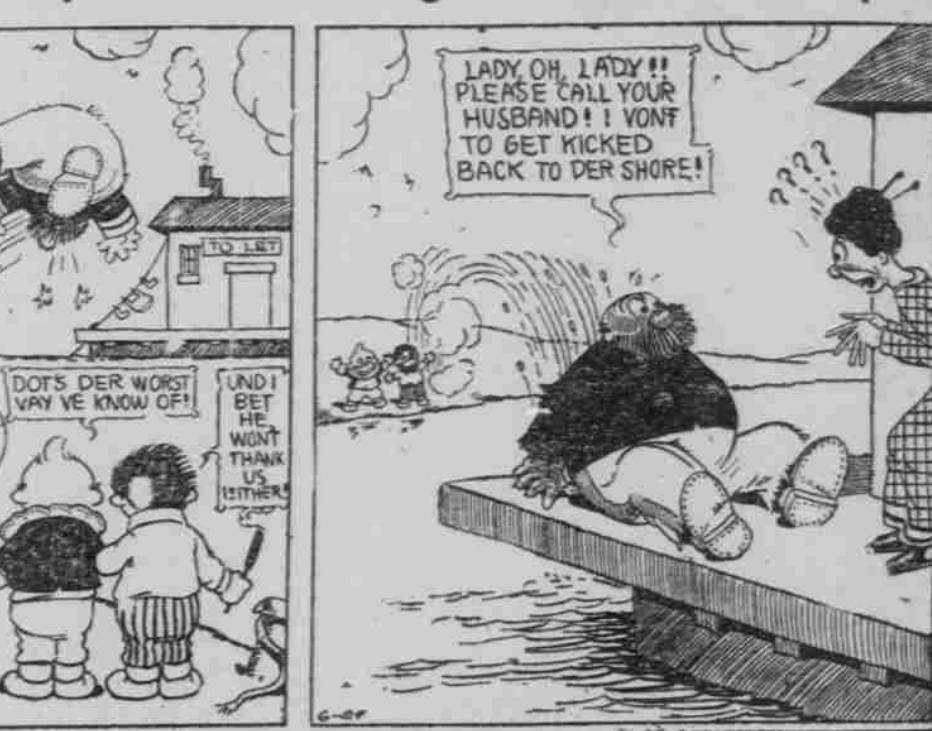

About 20 years ago, Charlie Mitchell, who at that time was considered the boxing champion of England, put in a great deal of his time in this country and made a legion of friends by his clever work in the ring.

Mitchell scaled only about 154 pounds, but he gave John L. Sullivan one of the hardest battles of his career when he fought him 29 rounds to a draw in France. Mitchell also had the reputation of being the first and only man to knock Sullivan flat, which occurred in Madison Square Garden, New York city, during a four round contest.

Willard To Slay With Circus

Now that Jess Willard, the heavyweight champion, has purchased a circus for himself, the outlook is not so bright for a world's championship match. The fact that Carl Morris was secured to go with the circus would indicate that Jess was willing to let Carl get into the limelight a bit himself.

It is not likely that with the Russell's around of circus tents, etc., Willard will care to make a match for some time to come. The logical opponent for Willard, of course, is Fred Fulton, the Rochester giant, but it seems that they have been trying to slide-track the Minnesota man the past few months, due to the fact that Carl Morris won an alleged foul from Fulton in five rounds.

According to the various reports, Fulton had the best of the fight when it came to actual boxing and not rough-house work.

ORGANIZED BASEBALL VINDICATED WHEN 'BALT' FEDS DROPPED SUIT

Lack of Evidence Caused Suit To Be Taken Out of Court By Attorneys of the Baltimore Federals; Organized Baseball Protected Itself By Using Reserve Clause in Contracts and Saved Players.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Organized baseball, and the principle upon which it is built, has been vindicated once more.

When the Baltimore Federals withdrew their $500,000 suit against O. B. in the United States district court at Baltimore recently they made a practical admission that there was nothing unlawful about the inside workings of the game.

The suit was withdrawn, it was announced, because of a lack of evidence that organized baseball had conspired to wreck the Baltimore club.

It was brought out that, despite statements to the contrary when the trial opened, the Baltimore Federals were in reality a party to the game, and that the Baltimore club had conspired to wreck the Baltimore club.

Had the owners of the Baltimore club been able to see a loop hole for a new line of attack, it is not improbable that they would have seized it. References to the reserve clause in player contracts and a claim that the clause gives organized baseball a monopoly on the playing talent were made when the trial opened, but the Baltimore Federals saw that they could not hope to shatter the very hypothesis which supports the "organized game."

The reserve clause as applied to players in organized baseball is upheld and respected by all club owners. The players themselves realize the necessity of such a clause and have willingly signed contracts containing it for years, simply because they know it is the foundation of the game.

Without the reserve clause leagues and clubs would soon be forced to the wall because of the fact that club owners who would spend the greatest amount of money could soon corral all the best talent in the league and race in the cold. One sided pennant races would be the result, and the foundation would drop from beneath the game.

The reserve clause in contracts drawn up by organized baseball does not apply to any outside interest. The magnates have agreed to protect each other's interests in their own ranks, but in seven cases out of ten the reserve clause would have but little effect should a player go to court to fight for the right to leave organized ranks and play with some team or league, such as the Federal league. It is true that many players did not leave O. B. ranks because they feared the hold the reserve clause had on them, but a great many others did bolt the O. B. corral, and there was nothing done about it.

There is little doubt that the "powers that be" in baseball felt a trifle shaky when the Baltimore suit came to trial, because of the fact that they expected the reserve clause would be attacked with every battery in position. The Baltimore people, and it felt that they might be called upon to go to extreme limits to show the court that the clause is absolutely necessary to the life of the game.

As it all turned out the pastime is standing firm and alone once more and no one is putting forth a question as to its integrity or its fairness of purpose. It takes a strongly organized game to withstand the jolts baseball has received within the past four or five years.

POLLOCK REFUTES S

Larry Pollock, manager of Freddy Welsh, is out with a statement denying the claim of Jimmy Johnston that Henry Leonard weighed 127 pounds when he fought and defeated Welsh. Pollock says he weighed the men himself with the inspector and that Leonard weighed 133 pounds exactly.

GOOD SCORES MADE

Sioux City, Iowa, June 26.—Unusually high scores featured the play in the qualifying round of the annual tournament of the Iowa state golf association Monday. Out of 300 players for the 18 holes, but 14 had marks under 80. Donald Knapp, the 18 year old school boy phenom of the Sioux City club, was medalist for the day with a score of 62.

SPORT SHRAPNEL

WHAT is the matter with Claude Graham in the Western league? Many fans both of the southwest and of the western circuit are wondering about this as the young twirler seems to have fallen down completely and is unable to show the sensational form of the earlier part of the season. Graham has made four starts since coming back to the Western league from the Michigan circuit, winning one, and losing the other three, being knocked out of the box in the latter instances. The first game was a no run no hit affair and was the first of this kind to be twirled in the Western league this season.

John Marty, the eminent cigar dealer made a hit by his showing Sunday afternoon when he handled everything that Haneey could serve up for six innings. Marty is a product of the Commercial Amateur league and is one of the snappiest first basemen in the entire organization.

At Adkins as a left fielder is one of the best in the league, but as a catcher he is far excellent. Al did some mighty nice work Sunday afternoon in the backstop's position, and showed that he can be used all around.

Two home runs over the right field fence set up a record Sunday afternoon for four base outs, in being the first time this season that two home runs have been made in a single day. That is bonafide home runs where the batter does not have to rush his head off to get around the sacks, while some gumshoe fielder is chasing down the ball.

Haneey, first string twirler of the Western league did good work Sunday afternoon. He was not as wild as he has been in the past and his fast ball was there in the pinches.

The greatest fault of Haneey in the past has been his wildness, and although this was much improved Sunday afternoon, young Marty had to make several nice dives after balls that broke feet outside the plate.

Umpire Dick Monahan handed down his first severe decision Sunday afternoon when he sent Bill Medina to the end after Medina had protested at a called strike. Be careful Ump, Medina is a good player, and the Western club needed him in the game. It would be well if the league could pass some ruling that would deal with an offense like that of Medina that would not end in banishment, as the game is short of good players, everyone knows that.
